Grant Project Experience

2022-2023 PI: Bethany Backes, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Criminal Justice & Social Work, Science Lead Violence Against Women Faculty Cluster

Safe Transitions: Longitudinal Examination of Domestic Violence Transitional Housing Models on Survivor Outcomes

For this project, I transcribed audio recordings of interviews, processed IRB paperwork for the study, and collaborated with other team members from the University of Texas Medical Branch Center for Violence Prevention and the University of Texas at Arlington to examine how transitional housing programs impact female survivors of intimate partner and domestic violence and their children.

Care on Campus: Screening for Intimate Partner Violence within Student Healthcare Settings

Regarding the work conducted under the Care on Campus (COC) project, I aided in the facilitation of training and implementation of the newly developed screening tool for past-year intimate partner violence (IPV) among college students at the University of Central Florida in the Student Health Services facility. Additionally, I aided in the processing of IRB paperwork, facilitation of data collection, and the overall logistics of coordinating graduate and undergraduate research assistants in their assigned tasks related to this project.

Intimate Partner Violence Pretrial Safety Analysis (IPV-APS)

For the IPV-APS project, I worked collaboratively with teams from Yale University and The University of Arizona to develop and implement a database hosted on FileMaker to use for data collection throughout the project's duration. In addition, I created a 200+ page manual to guide the onboarding process of new research assistants and associates to increase the effectiveness and efficiency of our training protocols.

Patterns of Poly-Victimization Exposure Across Racial and Ethnic Populations in the U.S.

Specific to this project, I aided in the development and submission of two manuscripts using the data collected during the duration of this grant. These manuscripts were developed to explore differences in polyvictimization between gender and racial and ethnic groups within the United States using national level NISVS data. The first of these manuscripts examining gender differences in domestic violence myth acceptance is currently under review at Crime & Delinquency.

Coronavirus and Domestic Violence Study for Criminal Justice Personnel

For the Coronavirus and Domestic Violence Study (COVID & DV),

I worked with graduate students to transcribe audio recordings of interviews conducted with criminal justice officials in law enforcement, prosecutorial roles, and advocacy roles. Additionally, I have led the development of a manuscript using data collected during the duration of this grant work aimed at better understanding differences in endorsement of Domestic Violence Myths.

PI: Julia O'Connor, Ph.D., Assistant Professor of Social Work

Exploring Protective-Factors for Sexual Violence Perpetration Among College-Aged Men. University of Central Florida. The Center for Behavioral Health Research and Training.

Under this project, I collaborated with faculty and graduate students in the development of a manuscript exploring protective factors for sexual violence perpetration among college aged men. This manuscript is currently under review at Victims & Offenders.

Methodological Training

Quantitative Analysis Tools

ArcGIS. I use many of the platforms associated with ESRI's ArcGIS software including ArcGIS Desktop, ArcGIS Pro, ArcGIS Online, ArcGIS Collector, and ArcGIS QuickCapture. I received a graduate certificate from the University of Memphis in GIS May of 2018 and continue my work with ArcGIS in both research and teaching capacities at the University of Central Florida.

GeoDa. I utilize GeoDa as a spatial statistic tool to aid in the development of research initiatives involving geographic analyses of violent crime data. Specifically, I utilize GeoDa to create spatial lag variables for analyses I conduct to ensure that all data is accurately projected.

SPSS, STATA, R, & SAS. I successfully completed courses using SPSS, R, and SAS during my master's degree program at the University of Memphis. Additionally, I have taken advanced statistics courses within my Ph.D. program using STATA. I currently use STATA and SPSS to conduct empirical research.

Qualitative Analysis Tools

Qualtrics. Throughout my time as a post-doctoral researcher, and previously as a graduate student, I used Qualtrics to program and implement survey instruments.

Trint. Trint is a transcription software that I use to aid with analysis efforts of qualitative data related to ongoing research projects being conducted at the Violence Against Women faculty cluster at the University of Central Florida.
